EXPLANATION OF RIGHTS TO RECORD EXPUNCTION UNDER ORS 419A. 260 to 419A. 262

These rights provide for the removal and destruction of some police and juvenile court records and a written explanation of your rights under the law. You may apply for expunction of your juvenile court records at any time. You probably have a right to have your records destroyed if the following is true:

- I. At least 5 years have passed since your last police or juvenile court involvement;
- II. You have not been convicted of any Felony or Class A Misdemeanor since termination of juvenile jurisdiction;
- III. No proceedings are presently pending against you.

This record destruction includes files in any agency known to have such information. Upon entry of an expunction order, the contacts that you may have had with the police and the juvenile court shall be treated as if they never occurred. You are entitled to a copy of the expunction order and a list of the agencies that have complied with the order. Thereafter, you may legally assert that the record never existed and that the contact never occurred. Anyone violating your right to confidentiality commits a misdemeanor, and intentional violations of the law may constitute invasions of your privacy giving you a right to an action against the violator for punitive damages in the amount of $1,000.00, in addition to any actual damages, costs and attorney's fee.
